Currently, all 50 states are members of the Interstate Compact, up from only three states when Washington joined the Compact in 2009. No major changes have occurred in Compact provisions.

8. Evaluations of program/major findings:

The Compact provisions have made the transitions for military children easier. In a survey of high impact districts, all are reporting full implementation of Compact provisions. As in previous years, requests for assistance continue to involve graduation requirements, residency issues, and kindergarten enrollment.

9. Major challenges faced by the program:

Continued participation in remote learning during out of state transfer, graduation requirements across states; timely access to special education services.

10. Future opportunities:

There is an interest to offer programmatic supports to schools to better serve their students from military families, we well as support to update websites to offer resources specifically targeting military families. There is a request to update the "Tough Topics" resource materials currently housed on the OSPI website to support schools in serving military students and families in a culturally responsive manner.
