What is the Report Card?
Washington’s Report Card shows data for the Washington K-12 public education system. The Report Card provides information on district and school success according to a number of measures, such as student graduation rates and performance on assessments. It also provides summary demographic information about students, such as race/ethnicity, and special program participation, such as students with disabilities.

The current Report Card also provides information about the race/ethnicity of teachers and their teaching certification.

How is it changing?
Report cards are one of the most powerful tools for informing decisions – large and small – about the direction of the education system.

OSPI is redesigning the Report Card to meet our federal accountability requirements, but also to make it easier to use by parents, educators, policy makers and the public. We are working with our partners, specifically with parents, to create an easier-to-understand Report Card that can be used to engage with schools at the local level as well as local and state policy makers.

The redesigned Report Card will include a variety of student, educator, and financial measures that paint a holistic picture of our K-12 system performance. Additionally, the redesigned Report Card will include the Washington School Improvement Framework (WSIF) and integrate other data displays, such as attendance and discipline, to present information in an integrated and easy to access manner.

How can I help?
After the initial launch in September, OSPI will be collecting comments and questions at ReportCardRedesign@k12.wa.us

Also keep an eye on the Report Card site for more information: http://reportcard.ospi.k12.wa.us

---

Report Card Redesign Timeline

September 2018
Assessment Release
- School, district, and state-level data
- Limited number of measures included
- Student group displays
- Located on tab on current Report Card
- ADA compliant

December 2018
Release 1
- ESSA measures: regular attendance, dual credit participation, 9th grade on-track
- Integration of the Washington School Improvement Framework (WSIF) and Assessment results
- New design for landing page; navigation; and visualization

February 2019
Release 2
- New year of WSIF data
- Kindergarten readiness data
- Student graduation rates

June 2019
Release 3
- Enhancements based on feedback are complete
- Old Report Card no longer accessible

2019-2020 School Year
- New Report Card fully operational.