UNIT 1: ELEMENTARY -- UNITED STATES HISTORY

ENCOUNTER, COLONIZATION, AND DEVASTATION: THE TRIBAL PERSPECTIVE

Level 2

Instructional Support Materials

“The Friend of the Indians” poem
“Encounter, Colonization, and Devastation” Comparison Graphic
Manahatta to Manhattan
Map - Current US tribal reservations outline
Map – US Colonies
Map – Northeast Indian Distribution
Map – Early Indian Tribes, Culture Areas, and Linguistic Stocks

Learning Goals

Students will:

- Participate in the enactment of a poem reading that demonstrates the impacts of colonization to Indians.
- Consider questions fairness and justification for taking things/spaces that are important to others.
- Use maps to examine the continued impacts of colonization to tribal people today.

Time: 2 class periods

Teacher Preparation

Photocopy classroom sets of:

“The Friend of the Indians” poem
“Encounter, Colonization, and Devastation” Comparison Graphic
Map - Current US tribal reservations outline
Map – US Colonies
Map – US NE Tribal Territory
Learning Activities

1. “Friend of the Indians” Activity. Line up five chairs or a bench in the front of the room. Ask a volunteer to help you. Have the volunteer sit in the second chair. This student will act as “The Friend.”
3. Depending on your preferences, have students do a choral read, ask volunteers to act as Red Jacket, the Friend, and the narrator.
4. You could also divide students into trios and have each trio do steps 8 and 9 below.
5. You will be Red Jacket. As the students read the poem aloud, you will direct your student volunteer move over as directed in the poem. In the last stanza, the student will have nowhere else to go, except off the chairs onto the floor.
6. Connect this activity with the sacred space activity and article…
   a. Taking things/spaces that are important to others is hurtful
   b. There is a question of fairness and justification for taking things important to others.
7. Introduce your classroom text’s chapter, unit, or section on American colonization and teach as you typically would, and include questions such as “Whose perspective seems to be missing?”
8. OPTIONAL: Read “The True Story
9. Complete the Level 2 Encounter, Colonization, and Devastation Comparison Graphic as you continue your study of this unit.
10. Conclude with showing a present day map of American Indian reservations in the United States today.
11. Ask, “Where did they all go?” Connect to colonization and introduce “justification.” Ask if there are any unfair actions that are “justified?”
12. Note: The following activities can be completed by using a computer lab instead of photocopies of the maps. Have students load the Colonial and Northeastern tribal territories and reservations maps onto their desktops. Either insert the images onto a Word Document or other drawing program (like Adobe Illustrator). Proceed with the activities according to the functions of the drawing program.
13. Distribute the following maps to either individual students or groups from Day 1
   a. US Colonies Map
   b. US NE Tribal Territory Map
14. Have students study the tribal regions maps. Note: These regions are approximate. If you ask different tribes, they often will have different ideas about where boundaries lie. Remember: there were no political boundaries, only naturally occurring boundaries.
15. Ask, “Why are the tribal boundaries most likely divided like they are?” Answers will focus on the naturally occurring boundaries in the region: rivers, mountains, bluffs, etc.
16. Project the topographical map of the US as an aid.
17. Then ask, “Where are the Northeastern tribes now?”
18. Distribute copies of the tribal reservations outline map.
19. Project the traditional tribal homelands map.
20. Have students compare the size and location of current state and federal reservations to the traditional tribal homelands.
21. Ask, “Why do you think this happened? Where did they all go?” Answers might range from illness, wars, or students might know that Indian tribes relinquished much of their land to non-Indian settlement. State that many tribes either had to combine with others, move altogether, and give up much of their tribal land so that Indians and non-Indians could live beside each other in peace. These formal agreements are called treaties. Treaties affected tribes’ abilities to make their own rules and live how they wanted. This ability is tribal sovereignty.
22. Ask, “How did this loss affect their ability to govern themselves? Their tribal sovereignty?”
23. Note: Because of tribes’ political history with the US Government, some tribes have lost their territories altogether. This would be a time to encourage your students to investigate what happened to the tribe(s). See this National Congress of American Indians web directory.
24. Local Connection: Spend a day researching the original tribal territories by visiting websites of the tribes in your area (see the Governor’s Office of Indian Affairs)
25. Wrap-Up: Point out what students tend to do when they feel they have been treated unfairly. Have students predict what happened next between tribal nations and the colonies.

NOTES: ____________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________
_____________________________________________________________________